

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

rev.2-2021 / arsinterpretandi.it

Submission

Editors welcome only original and unpublished papers. Submitted papers should be no more than 40.000 characters in length (bibliography, notes and spaces included).

Papers written in English, French, Spanish or German can be published in their original language.

Issues are thematic, therefore papers shall be presented following the calls for papers that will be published and only exceptionally under invitation. Only papers accepted after a double-blind peer review process will be published.

Authors should send their contributions by e-mail to redazione@arsinterpretandi.it. The file should include an English translation of the title with an abstract of no more than 800 characters and the indication of five keywords, both in English.

“Ars Interpretandi” acknowledges the reception of proposed papers by email within five days.

In order to guarantee anonymity, all personal information about the author (name, surname, institution, academic or professional position, e-mail and telephone) should not appear in the paper and it should be included in a separate file with the title of the paper. For the same reason, authors are asked to remain anonymous by avoiding references to themselves or their work.

Evaluation and review process

Every paper will be subjected to a written and double blind peer review by two external reviewers selected within a list of available experts, Italians or not, selected among the professors of legal-philosophical matters as well as connected ones; the review process is to be completed within one month.

If the reviews made by the anonymous specialists are both favorable, the paper will be accepted for publication. If the reviewers sharply disagree in their evaluation, the paper will be subjected to a review by a third and anonymous expert. If the reviews are favorable but suggest revisions or changes, the text will be sent back to the author with the invitation to consider the specialists’ comments and resubmit a revised version, following the suggestions of the reviewers. If both reviews are negative the paper will be definitively rejected.

When the Editors receive the corrected paper, they will determine whether the author has incorporated the comments and the suggested changes. If it is the case, the paper will be accepted. Otherwise, the paper will be definitively rejected.

The review documents are archived, Every two years the Journal will publicly acknowledge the reviewers who contributed to the evaluation process.

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

rev.2-2021 / arsinterpretandi.it

Editing guidelines

References should be added in footnotes, numbered in Arabic numbers, following the APA author-date style. E.g.:

Marks, 2000, pp. 68-70.

In the reference list at the end of the paper works should be listed in alphabetical order following the APA style, here some examples:

Monographs:

Rodotà, S. (1973). Elaboratori elettronici e controllo sociale. Il Mulino.

Translations:

Zuboff, S. (2019). Il capitalismo della sorveglianza: Il futuro dell'umanità nell'era dei nuovi poteri (trad. it P. Bassotti). Luiss University Press.

Edited Book Chapters:

Brownsword, R. (2008). Regulating Technologies: Challenge and Opportunity. In Rights, Regulation, and the Technological Revolution (pp. 283–317). Oxford University Press.

Journal Articles:

Raz, J. (1972). Legal Principles and the Limits of Law. The Yale Law Journal, 81(5), 823–854.

Further guidelines

1. For English titles it is asked to use upper-case letters for the initials of verbs, nouns and adjectives;

2. In the case of works with two authors, first names and family names of each author should be indicated following the general rules, separated by comma and without using “e” or “and”;

3. When making reference to an (Italian) translation, in the footnotes, the following criteria should be observed: Williams (1974-75), trad. it. 1987, p. 183;

4. Always use double quotes (“ ”) for quotations or emphasis; single quotes (‘ ’) shall be used only for a quotation or emphasis within a quote.